

Hello,

As HubSpot co-founder Dharmesh Shah says, “Success is making those who believed in you look brilliant.” That’s why we celebrate the partners and customers who have believed in us, giving out our Inbound Impact Awards to those who have been at the top of their game.

As part of your marketing agency’s submission to throw their hat in the ring, they’d like to submit examples of their work for your company to show the great work they do.

Once your marketing agency submits their work for you as an entry for one of our awards, we might want to use some information about you and your company in connections with the voting process and the announcement of our winners. This may include, but not limited to your company name, company logo, screenshots of your company’s website, e-books that your marketing agency has helped with, and other information about the work your marketing agency has done for you. We may also use this formation to announce the awards on our website, in public or private presentations, press releases and interviews, or in connection with our sales and marketing.

Additionally, your marketing agency might want to use the same types of information about your company to write a blog post or other content to announce their submission.

If you agree to let us and your marketing agency use your company name, company logo, and other materials of yours submitted by your marketing agency in connection with our 2018 HubSpot Impact awards, please sign below to confirm agreement.

Thanks for being a part of our HubSpot family, and we look forward to continuing our work (and success) with you!

Best,

Kipp Bodnar
Chief Marketing Officer
